Roads and Fields Snowed Under— Telegraph Wires Down.

French Soldiers After Buried Treas- ure—General Cable News.

LONDON, April 18.—The British have good reason to grumble at the weather now prevailing. People were beginning to congratulate themselves upon an early spring, when suddenly there was a change in the temperature and mid-winter weather again set in. Snowstorms prevailed throughout the length and breadth of the kingdom and the budding trees and sprouting crops were much damaged.

Many towns were and are still completely isolated by the heavy drifts, and are barred from communication with the outside world by the destruction of the telegraph lines. So great is the damage to the telegraph lines that the ordinary force of men and horses is unable to repair the wires as quickly as the demands of the service require and soldiers have been employed to assist them.

In the County of Essex the Stour, Blackwater, Lea, and other rivers have been swelled to an abnormal height by the storms, and in many places the country is flooded.

In some parts the situation is serious. The losses incurred by farmers and fruit-growers will be very great, owing to the vegetables being either washed out of the ground or killed by the frost. Fruit trees that were budding and giving promise of an abundant yield are now blackened and will yield nothing.

Great damage has been done to the crops in the Channel Islands. On the island of Jersey, where snow and frost are rare, the weather has been phenomenally cold. It is estimated that here alone the loss on the potato crop will amount to £100,000.

The cold shows no sign of abatement. In many places the ground is covered with snow a foot deep. In some parts of the country the storms have been as severe as any that occurred during the winter—regular blizzards, in fact. The meteorological observations show that the storm now prevailing is travelling in a northwesterly direction, and dispatches announce that it is beginning to be felt in the Baltic.

A heavy snowstorm is raging to-day in North Wales and Cheshire.

Despatches from Paris and places in the North of France state that hail and sleet are falling and the weather is bitterly cold. It is feared that much damage will be done to the early crops.

The troops at Thorncliffe paraded to-day as usual on Easter Monday, and waited over an hour, exposed to the boisterous and cold weather, to be inspected by the Duke of Cambridge, the Commander-in-Chief of the forces. The Duke did not arrive at the expected time and finally the troops were disbanded. Soon afterwards the Duke arrived and found the parade ground deserted. The soldiers were again summoned and a short review was held.

Reports of Buried Treasures Incite the French to Take Abode.

LONDON, April 18.—The Globe to-day publishes a letter from a correspondent who, the paper says, is well informed as to the matter upon which he writes, giving an explanation of the preparations now being made by France for a war upon Dahomey.

The Globe's correspondent says that it is believed on good grounds that an immense treasure, the accumulation of upward of two centuries, is buried in Abomey, the capital of Dahomey. Allowing largely for exaggeration, this treasure, the writer declares, is said to be worth a sum equivalent to 500,000,000 francs.

It is known that the successive Kings of Dahomey have buried vast quantities of bullion within the precincts of the palace in a number of large pits, ten or more of which are said to contain gold and silver to the amount of several millions of francs each.

Authentic reports of the existence of this treasure reached the French through missionaries and traders, and this readily accounts for the eagerness displayed by the French to capture Abomey.

Election Affairs in Barcelona—A Ballot-Box Seized.

BARCELONA, April 18.—This city was yesterday the scene of a number of affairs, some of which are likely to result seriously to a number of the participants. The occasion was a by-election for a member of the Cortes.

Farman feeling was excited to the highest degree, and free fights were of frequent occurrence. Sticks and knives were freely used as weapons of offense and defense and some very severe wounds were inflicted.

In the midst of the uproar two men armed with revolvers and a pistol, and a bottle of acid, rushed up to the platform, seized the voting-box and smashed it to pieces, the ballots being scattered in every direction.

The spectators attempted to arrest the men, but the latter slashed right and left with their knives and cut their way out of the booth. They finally made their escape, but the police expect soon to capture them as they are both well known.

Senior Salmeron, the well-known Republican, an ex-Member of the Cortes, who was defeated at the general election in February, 1891, was elected.

Big Tom Awaits Reappointment.

Street-Commissioner Brennan has not yet received official notice from Albany that the Legislature has passed the new street-cleaning law, which necessitates the reorganization of the entire department. The Commissioner says he has no appointment until he is himself reappointed.

Easter Dinwiddie was buried to-day in Poughkeepsie. This is the end of one portion of a most romantic love episode.

Readers of THE EVENING WORLD will recall the attempt which John H. Dinwiddie, of 228 West Twentieth street, made last Tuesday to recover his daughter, Amy Colby, by process of law, on the ground that she had been induced by Foster Danwood to live with him against her will. The daughter denied this, saying that she was well aware of what she was doing, and refused to return to her father's home.

When arraigned in Police Court on her father's complaint Mrs. Colby said to the justice:

"Mr. Dinwiddie is divorced and I am seeking a divorce. When a decree is granted we shall be married. I am perfectly well aware of the moral aspects of the situation in which I am placed."

Her father's complaint was dismissed.

The status of this love has as yet been but partially told. For nothing has been said of the pure, heroic, self-sacrificing devotion of this woman, who presumably suffered unmerited suspicion to rest upon her character rather than forsake her dying lover.

Dinwiddie's body was taken yesterday morning by Mrs. Colby and Lucy Dinwiddie, the dead man's sister, to Poughkeepsie for interment.

David W. Boyd, in whose rooms at 334 West Sixteenth street Dinwiddie died, said to an EVENING WORLD reporter to-day:

"Dinwiddie was my cousin. He was a thoroughly good man. He was divorced from his wife and was going to marry Amy Colby as soon as she could be divorced."

"The lovers met eighteen months ago. She was infatuated with him from the first. He pitied her on account of the harsh treatment her father was subjecting her to and resolved to marry in order to protect her. Dinwiddie was earning $25 a week."

"Amy is a nice girl, and I know positively that her relations with Dinwiddie were altogether proper."

"If it had not been for her father's endeavoring to coerce her into a marriage with a rich young man whom she did not like, Amy would have been a very different person. I am sure she would have been a very different person."

A heavy snowstorm is raging to-day in North Wales and Cheshire.

MRS. CLEVELAND'S NEW HOME.

It Will Be on Fifty-first Street,
Near Fifth Avenue.

She Will Be a Neighbor of Mrs. W.
H. Vanderbilt.

Residents of West Fifty-first street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, are delighted because they are to have an ex-President of the United States living on their block.

THE CLEVELANDS' NEW RESIDENCE.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover Cleveland have taken a lease of the house at 12 West Fifty-first street, and if the decorators complete their work in the time expected the neighbors may get an occasional glimpse of Baby Ruth in a few weeks. It is possible, however, that the ex-President's new home may not be ready for occupancy before the very warm weather sets in, and in this case the house will not be occupied until the family returns from Buzzard's Bay at the end of the summer season.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland are now staying at the Victoria Hotel, their temporary residence at 618 Madison avenue, where Baby Ruth was born, having been presented by its owner, Henry G. Marquand, to his daughter as a wedding gift.

It is understood that the lease of 12 West Fifty-first street is not a long one, but the house is to be handsomely redecorated for the ex-President. It is more commodious than his former home and its location is most desirable.

The new home of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland is a three-story and basement brownstone front, with a mansard roof. It is one of a row of three exactly alike in architecture.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland's next-door neighbors are Mr. and E. C. Benedict, in whose steam yacht Onida Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland returned from Buzzard's Bay last fall, on one side, and Mr. Henry Rosenberg, a Mercer street lace manufacturer, on the other.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie's town house is almost directly opposite, while on the Fifth avenue corner, only a few doors from Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland's new home, are the mansions of Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt and Samuel D. Babcock.

Mrs. Cleveland delights in "anagories," and a feature of her Madison avenue home was the corner where guests on reception nights and afterwards could withdraw from the crowd for a tea-table.

Her new home on West Fifty-first street may not perhaps afford the same opportunities, for it is entirely different in its interior arrangement, but with her exquisite taste Mrs. Cleveland will be able to make it extremely attractive.

The date for the removal of the family to their summer home, Gray Gables, at Buzzard's Bay has not yet been fixed.

RUSTLERS SPREAD TERROR.

Residents of Johnson County,
Wyo., Warned to Take Flight.

No Attempt Yet Made to Move the Prisoners from Fort McKinney.

NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., April 18.—A number of people fleeing from the rustler country have passed through Cheyenne. Their stories are so graphic that the only reliable news gained from them is that the rustlers have completely terrorized Johnson County. One of the stockmen who arrived here last night shows a notice received from a secret organization of the rustlers, warning him to leave the country within five days or be killed. He says dozens of the fleeing cattlemen have received similar notices.

Both Gov. Barber and Gen. Brooke, who have been in constant telegraphic communication with each other, are anxiously awaiting news from Fort McKinney. It is now admitted by the citizens here and at Douglas that Sheriff Angus has had the wire cut in order to prevent an order being sent from Gen. Brooke to Col. Van Horn at Fort McKinney to deliver the prisoners to Gov. Barber at Cheyenne.

Public men regard the situation as alarming, and few can be made to admit that it is at all probable that all cattlemen can be got out of the country alive. Gov. Barber says he has discussed the plan of sending a commission to Buffalo to investigate the true condition of affairs in that country. This will probably be done.

No steps have been taken to bring the prisoners to Douglas, and the Governor disclaims any intention of releasing them from the action of the law. He says they will be turned over to the civil authorities as soon as they can protect them from mob violence. If these assurances reach Johnson County the excitement there may be allayed.

It is generally believed here that if the people of that section could get the rustlers out of the country, they would be observed in future treatment of the prisoners there will be no attempt at violence towards any of them. A rumor that the troops at Fort Russell have been called out is denied by the officers of the regiment stationed there.

BYRNES MEANS WAR.

He Will Keep Up the Tight Sunday-Closing Crusade.

Let the Saloon-Keepers Go to the Legislature, He Says.

More Than a Hundred Contumacious Dealers Were Arrested.

The determined efforts of the police to enforce the law against selling liquor on Sunday and the effort of making this city almost as dry as the desert of Sahara—at least to a very large number of its citizens.

That a considerable number of side doors were ajar on the day yesterday is not to be doubted, and the fact that between ninety and a hundred liquor-sellers, including proprietors of saloons and bartenders, were captured by Supt. Byrnes's officers shows that extensive efforts were made to evade the law.

All those arrested were arraigned in the various police courts this morning, and each was held for trial.

Supt. Byrnes appears to be well satisfied with the result of the first Sunday's record under his rule, and though he does not care to discuss in detail his plans for following out the campaign against illegal liquor traffic, it is easy to see that he is determined, and there is good reason to believe that he is going to make things extremely unpleasant for any saloon-keeper who thinks that he can violate the Sunday law openly without interference.

Citizens who had not the personal acquaintance of some wicked saloon-keeper in their own neighborhood found difficulty in obtaining liquor refreshments, and might tap at a score of side doors in a fruitless attempt to get admission. Although they might be morally certain that at the same moment a company of favored guests was within, enjoying the hospitality of the house.

When Morris Tekulsky, President of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, was asked if all the saloons in the city were closed yesterday, a large-sized smile broadened his features.

"The saloons all closed," he repeated.

"Well, I should say they were not. It was easy enough for a man to get a drink yesterday if he knew how, but he had hard work to get in anywhere on the strength of his looks."

In town, however, that Supt. Byrnes is in earnest in this matter. But neither he nor any other man can close all the saloons.

"My place was closed of my own free will, and that has been my custom of Sunday; but they couldn't make me shut up my place every time they tried to open them. I am, I imagine, with all other liquor dealers, in a predicament. As long as there is a demand for liquor on Sunday there is going to be a supply somewhere, and the whole police force cannot prevent the liquor-dealers from supplying this demand."

These remarks of Mr. Tekulsky were reported to Supt. Byrnes, who was just in the act of his window to Mulberry street.

"Well," he said finally, "I have nothing to do with this gentleman's views upon the subject. What his knowledge of the records of the saloon-keepers may be, or as to who does or who does not keep open house on Sunday, is none of my business."

"I will say, however, that I have had nothing to do with the making of the present law, and if the dealers think it is oppressive, they will have to appeal to the Legislature, who made it, to have it repealed or modified."

I have found it in existence, and it is simply strictly enforced. I have no business, and I shall certainly endeavor to do, to the best of my ability."

"Indeed, I have understood through a great many of the liquor dealers that a very large class of the respectable element in the city are desirous of having the law as to Sunday closing repealed. It is a pity that it is not repealed, and I shall certainly endeavor to do, to the best of my ability."

MORE CENSURE FOR DR. COX.

Bellevue Doctors Charge Him with Cruelty to a Patient.

Charges of neglect and cruelty to a patient are made again to-day against Dr. Cox, the young ambulance surgeon at Roosevelt Hospital who, five weeks ago, left Bridget Mackin in the street after she had been run over by a wagon and injured so that she died.

Saturday night Dr. Cox took Fritz Winters from 333 West Fortieth street, badly burned about the head, face and neck, to Bellevue Hospital without offering the suffering man the slightest relief.

Dr. A. D. Hubbard, who dressed the injuries of Winters when brought to the Hospital, said this morning:

"I consider this a case of brutal neglect on the part of Dr. Cox. The idea of bringing a man from Fortieth street while suffering the most intense pain, whose eyes were so badly burned that he groined and groined every time he tried to open them. Inhuman, and a man who would do it is unworthy the title of M. D. The excuse of Dr. Cox that it would cause the man unnecessary pain to put on temporary bandages is silly and childish."

Dr. George B. Cushing, who was reported as having said that Dr. Cox was just in doing as he did, this morning said that he had not understood the case.

"When the patient was placed under my care his injuries were neatly dressed and I could see no reason why Dr. Cox should be blamed. I have since ascertained that the dressing was done by Dr. Hubbard, and I certainly consider Dr. Cox very much in the wrong when he allows a man to suffer for an hour unnecessarily."

Winters is a butcher, sixty-six years of age. He was burned by the explosion of a lamp.

RAILROAD STRIKE IMPENDS.

Lehigh and Jersey Central Engineers in Angry Mood.

The Hudson Division of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has called a special meeting of its members for Wednesday next, in Jersey City, to discuss the grievances of the men on the Lehigh Valley Branch of the Reading Railroad.

Some of the engineers have been discharged without apparent cause, since the great "deal" was consummated between the Reading and other companies. It is rumored that more will have to go, but the company's officers deny this.

The engineers of the Central Railroad of New Jersey have suffered as well as the Lehigh men, and well-informed people say that a strike is ordered. It will be likely to involve the entire Philadelphia and Reading systems.

Not only the engineers, but all the employees of these roads are grumbling over a reduction which has been made in the freight rates.

A number of freight trains that have been hauling coal from the mines in Pennsylvania have been taken off, and the machine-shop employees in Easton have been put on half time.

This action is an outgrowth of the recent acquisition of coal mines by the Philadelphia and Reading, and in pursuance of a scheme they sought to legalize in the New Jersey legislature they are now restricting the output of coal for the purpose of increasing its price.

The men who have been laid off through the abandonment of this coal traffic are clamoring for their trains put back so they will be employed.

JUSTICE O'REILLY'S CONDITION.

Rumor Says He Is Worse, but a Letter to His Son Denies It.

Considerable regret was expressed in political circles to-day over a report that Justice Daniel O'Reilly's malady, for the treatment of which he went abroad, is becoming worse and that there is little hope for his recovery.

This information was reported to have been sent from Ireland, where Justice O'Reilly and his wife are enjoying a letter to a Dublin specialist and despaired of effecting a permanent cure.

At Justice O'Reilly's home, 44 Marion street, an EVENING WORLD reporter was informed that Daniel O'Reilly, Jr., received a letter last week stating that his father's condition was much improved and that his condition was not nearly so bad as had been represented by rumors.

Justice O'Reilly sailed for Ireland about five weeks ago. He was able to attend to his court duties up to within a week before he left.

THREADMAKERS ON STRIKE.

Twenty-five Operatives Go Out of the Ling Company's Works.

NEWARK, April 18.—Twenty-five employees of the Ling Thread Company, at Greenville, alleged to be tyrannical shop rules. The men also claim that they are underpaid.

The superintendent of the factory told an EVENING WORLD reporter that the works were not crippled by the strike.

His Junk Shop Open Sunday.

Justice Kilbuck in the Essex Market Court this morning held Max Bernstein for trial for keeping his junk store at 33 Hester street open yesterday.

LAST EDITION.

BILLY M'GLORY OUT OF JAIL.

Called from Prison to Appear as a Witness for His Wife.

The Dive-keeper Becoming 'Froliculent in Blacksmithing.

Billy McGlory, of the first dive-keeper convicted as a result of The Kravens' War, who was sentenced to a year's imprisonment on Blackwell's Island and to pay a fine of $300, enjoyed a brief interval of liberty to-day.

He was temporarily released on a writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Hook-staver, requiring the Penitentiary authorities to produce him at the Equity Term of the Court of Common Pleas to-day, where he is to appear as a witness in an action brought by his wife against Carrie Schwartz to compel her to execute a satisfaction on a mortgage on the McGlory residence in Ninety-third street.

The ex-dive-keeper would be unrecognizable to many acquaintances as he appeared in court to-day. The long, curly, colored locks were shorn close to the scalp, and the lip that formerly grew such an abundant, silky crop of hair was now shaven. There were lines of care upon his thin face, but his eyes seemed to be as bright and sparkling as of yore.

He was dressed with his old-time in a stylish spring suit of dark wool-cloth material and a blue velvet overcoat that fitted him perfectly. His feet were incased in fine black shoes. McGlory's lawyer, Mr. J. J. Connelley, called upon McGlory before he was brought to court, and McGlory refused to talk to any one except his wife, who sat beside him, and her counsel.

McGlory, in charge of Hall-keeper Kennedy, came to the city on the 10 o'clock train and was met at the pier by Mrs. McGlory. He was handcuffed to the keeper, the steel bracelet and chain being deftly concealed in the folds of his overcoat. On arriving at the court-room the handcuffs were removed, but he was kept close to the keeper.

Keeper Kennedy says McGlory is a modest lawyer and has got to be a skilled driver, at which work he is employed in the blacksmithing department. He has yet about seven months to serve.

McGlory called upon McGlory before he was brought to court, and McGlory refused to talk to any one except his wife, who sat beside him, and her counsel.

The Orisaba brought up fifty logs of mahogany which formed part of the cargo of the wrecked bark.

The Orisaba had pleasant weather the entire passage and did not meet the cyclone that struck the Bermuda, that got in yesterday.

CONKLIN READY TO REPLY.

on the Stand To-morrow.

Ex-Director W. A. Conklin, of the Central Park Zoo, is ready to make his statement before the Commissioners of Accounts in reply to the charges preferred against him during the investigation into his management of the Park menagerie. He will go on the stand to-morrow.

The investigation of Park affairs in general was resumed to-day, with Property Clerk Van Valkenburg as a witness. He was questioned by the committee, showing that his duties were largely clerical.

James Conway, employed at the Central Park menagerie, testified that there were no scales to verify the weight of forage bought by the city.

The investigation will close with Mr. Conklin's testimony to-morrow.

DIED AFTER A FIGHT.

Edward Healey Found Bruised and Bleeding in a Box Car.

The police of Jersey City are to-day seeking to unravel the mystery of the death of four-year-old Edward Healey, of 272 Twelfth street, who was last night found lying in a freight car in the Erie Railroad yard and who died while being carried to a police station.

The boy's face was bruised and discolored, and there was considerable blood on his clothes. Whether he died from the effects of a beating or from organic trouble can be determined only by a post-mortem. The police profess to believe that Healey engaged in a fight with one of his companions, and in the way sustained injuries from which he died.
